Flights Grounded Across U.S. After F.A.A. System Failure

January 11, 2023
New York Times

Domestic departures were paused across the United States early Wednesday. There was no evidence of a cyberattack, the White House said.

Flights across the United States were grounded early Wednesday, as airlines coped with a Federal Aviation Administration system failure. The agency said early Wednesday it was “beginning to come back on line.”

Here's what to know:

- The F.A.A. ordered airlines to pause all domestic departures until 9 a.m. Eastern time “to allow the agency to validate the integrity of flight and safety information,” it said in a statement. More than 2,500 flights within, into and out of the United States had been delayed on Wednesday, according to FlightAware,

- a flight tracking service.
- The delays were spread across the country and affected multiple carriers. United Airlines said in a statement that it had temporarily delayed all domestic flights and that it would issue an update when it learned more from the F.A.A. American Airlines said the situation “impacts all airlines” and that it was “working with the F.A.A. to minimize disruption to our operation and customers.”
  - The F.A.A. is “still working” to resolve the issue, it said Wednesday morning.
