Government reopens after record shutdown

We are pleased to share that the government shutdown has officially ended.

As operations resume, we extend our deepest gratitude to the federal workers, especially those in aviation, who continued to keep our skies safe during more than 40 days without pay. Their dedication is truly extraordinary.

U.S. carriers anticipate returning to full capacity over the next several days, though impacts can linger. We appreciate your patience as the industry stabilizes and schedules normalize.

Moments like this highlight the indispensable role of the travel advisor. When systems falter and travelers face uncertainty, it is advisors who provide clarity, confidence, and solutions that technology alone cannot replicate. We are here to support our travelers, advocate for you, and ensure your journey continues as smoothly as possible.
